TORNADO AND RAIN STORM.

Mecent Storms Overshadowed by That of Wednesday Night-Scenes of Terror and Confusion,

WACO, Tex . May 29 .- The violence of the late storms here is overshadowed by the rain and tornado of Wednesday night. The rain fall did not cease until yesterday morning. All streams in and close to the suburbs of the city, the banks of which were dotted with hundreds of residences, overflowed and transformed their surroundings into a vast sea. The scenes of terror and confusion were heart rending; people fled for their lives from their homes in the midst of the raging storm. Thomas Benninghoff, his wife and three small children remained in their house, which was washed away and all were drowned. Howard Lewis, his wife, his sister and three small children lost their lives in a similar manner. Eleven persons are known to have perished and five others are nnaccounted for, and reported to be drowned. The damage to property by the tornado was very large. The total damage in the city is estimated at $50,000. The Brazos River rose two feet aboye high water mark. The finest cotton plantations in Texas are located along the banks and were submerged. The loss in McLennen County will aggregate faily a querier of a million dollars. The grain crop is destroyed, beaten to the earth by the wind and terrific raio.

East Waco has been inundated since Sunday. The scenes there yesterday were indescrible. Seeing that the waters of the Brazos River threatened them with watery graves, the population-about 2,000 persons-fled frem their homes in the midst of the storm, lives are reported lost in that portion of the | a new trial. city. The river rose all day, but at 6 o'clock last evening appeared to have come to a standstill.

There were no trains on any of the roads yesterday. Scores of bridges were swept away and the road beds badly damaged by washouts. At Tredell and Morgan, in Bosque County, a number of residences were wrecked. but no fatalities are reported.

At 11:30 o'clock last night the Brazos River had fallen six inches. The highest point reached was thirty-two inches above the high water of last year. The approaches to the pistol. The trigger being hard to work, he spans of the bridge on the east side of the river were demolished. A large amount of the obstructions from above may carry both bridges away at any mement. The estimates of the damage to property in and about Waco do not include the damage to crops and farm property, which can not now be estimated. but good judges place the damage to the growing crop at $500,000. The storm was so terzific for three hours that it may be properly called a tornado accompanied by rain. Between 9 and 12 o'clock at night the rain fell in blinding sheets and was blown against the large buildings producing a sound like the distant roar of Niagara. Everybody in the city was up all night. Many colored paople thought a second deluge was upon them and prepared themselves to go by vigorous

Senate Sub-Committee on Inter-State Com-

PRILADELPHIA, Pa., May 28.—The United States Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce resumed its session to-day in the Continental Hotel. Professor Edward James, of the University of Pennsylvania, was heard on the subject. He thought that the subject of inter State commerce had arrived at such a point that it should be regulated by a National Commission, with absolute power to prevent discrimination. "As to giving it power to fix rates," Professor James adds, "that would be a matter of the fature. We scar cely know yet enough on the subject to go so far." Going deeper into the subject of the commission's authority, Professor James said: "The Commissioners' decision should be absolute. There should be no appeal from it. All cases, however, should not come before it. As a consequence, of the creation of a body so absolute in authority, there should be commissions of inferior power, like interior courts. They could, of course, decide many cases. The all powerful cemmission would thus be, as it were, a Supreme Court" Relating to his personal experience the Professor cited a case where, some time ago, he had some coal brought from a mine located sixty miles from Patiadelphia at that time for less than $5 per tou. General Isaac Wiston, Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's canals, was next beard. He thought it very unfortunate that railroads should own canals. In Pennsylvania there is no use in keeping up the canals, because they are owned by the railroads, and there can be no competi-

He would improve the harbors by leaving them to nature. He knew the Mississippi jetties bad greatly increased trade on that stream, but he believed that no matter what the productive facilities of the South might be, and the Government did nothing, the producers would get their products to market. In other words, private individuals would improve our harbors if the Government did

"When General Grant was President," replied General Winstor. "I spoke to him on the subject. My idea was for the Government to construct a large canal, at one-tenth the cost of our river and barbor improvements, connecting all the smaller ones with the wealthiest centers of the country. Then a fleet of ganboats might be constructed. These could run on any portion of the canal and could be summoned to any point by telegraph. I am of the opinion that a system of this kind would afford more protection to the country than our combined forts and arsenals." As to the commercial value of such a scheme, that is seen on its face. Mr. John Norris, one of the editors of the Record, explained the effect of freight rates on the distribution of coat. He did not favor a railroad commission, as it would bring the roads into politics. He favored railroad courts.

The committee then adjourned. It will resume its sessions June 12 at Chicago,

A Bedford Tragedy-Removal.

Brecial to the Sentinel. BEDFORD, Ind., May 29.-A few nights sgo Greenberry Bright, who lived eight miles southeast of Bedford, in this county, went to the house of a Mrs. Wickoff at Funnelton and demanded admittance. The Toy Pistol Again.

Special to the Sentine! BRAZIL, Ind., May 29 .- The citizens of our town were startled again this morning at the report of the tragical death of little Johnnie Gregg. He was the son of Professor J. C. Gregg, who was for many years the principal of the Brazil schools. Little Johnnie had started out to amuse himself with a toy climbed a fence and began to try to make it go off, unceciously holding the muzzle rgainst his side. The pistol went off, shoot ing him through the beart. He fell from the fence, but was able to rise and go into the nearest house, where he fell dead. Little Johnnie was a bright child, nine or ten years of age. The bereaved family have the sin cere sympathy of the entire community. We hope there will be no more tragedies to report from Brezil for a long time, as we think we have had far more than our share this

The Fatal State Department.

[Cleveland Leader.] The State Department, which at the begin ning of our Government was looked upon as the stepping stone to the Presidency, became later on singularly fatal to the ambitions of almost every man who took charge of it, and its possession in many cases has been the forerunner of disaster, disease and ceath. Upshur, one of Tyler's Sacretaries of State, was blown up on the Princeton while be was in office, and Hugh S. Legare, the Secretary of State who preceded Upshur, died at Foston at the celebration of the Banker Hill Monument, which he was attending with the President in his capacity as Secretary. Daniel Webster, while acting as Fillmore's Secretary of State, was in 1852 thrown from his carriage and there received the in juries which caused his death the following October. Secretary William H. Saward never recovered fully from the blow of the assessin Payne, which he received on the night Lincoln was killed, and his political fature was injured by his connection with Johnson in the State Department in the following administration. James G. Blaige narrowly escaped receiving Guiteau's bullet when be walked down to the depot arm in arm with President Garfield to see him off to Long Branch, and the dissatisfaction with B aine's aggressive policy as Secretary of State probably lost him enough votes during the last election to put Cleveland in the White House, Had Henry Clay not accepted the State portfolio from John Quincy Adams the 'bargain' and "corruption" cry would never have been raised and Clay would have probably not have died disappointed in his ambition to be President. John C. Calhoun's future was largely affected by the fights he had while Secretary of State, by which he became estranged from Jackson and his party, and Marcy and Cass dropped out of Merchant Traveler. Uncle Davy was giving the boys some advice in their love-making affairs, and one of them asked him how the young people did when he was sparking. "Them was great times, boys," he said in raply. "We didn't have no gas nor no kerosene. We done our sparkin' by plain tallow dip; but most frequently just by the firelight. Firelight is warmin' boys, and flickers just enough to make a girl's eyes shine. It's mighty soft and purty, too, and kinder in a way none of your gaslights knows anything about. Sometimes the fire shined up a little too powerful in places, and the young man would get up without sayin' anything and put a shovelful of ashes on it. Then he would caddle up to the girl in the shadows, and she would ouddle some, too, and it really didn't seem like there was anything else in the whole big round earth to be wished for. Party soon the fire would git obstreperous again. and the little flames would twinkle in and out, as if they wanted to see what was goin' on, or had seen, and was laughin' and winkin' about it and havin' some fun, too, and the young fellow would reach for the shov-el and the ashes and cover the bright blazes all up. And sometimes-remember, now. only sometimes-the girl would get up and put ashes on, and then-well, boys, when the bluebirds came in the spring, and the fishin' worms crawled out of the ground, and the boys set on the green banks of the little creek waitin' for a bite, and the johanyjump-up nestled in the sunny places, there was a weddin' in the old house, and when the winter come again they set by their own fire, and the shovel and the ashes were out cfa job."
